

BANK PAYS TRIBUTE TO THE LATE DR. BRADLEY NILES

The Central Bank of Barbados today expressed sadness and regret at the passing of Dr. Bradley Niles, Director of the School of Continuing Studies, University of the West Indies.

Governor Dr. Marion Williams described Dr. Niles as a dedicated and tireless teacher, and outstanding Barbadian who put country before self in the pursuit of a better adult educational system.

She also credited Dr. Niles for ensuring that valuable research done by eminent professors and graduates of the University of the West Indies was made public so that the country could benefit from the insights of academic studies.

“Dr. Niles made sure that researchers were able to share their research with the widest possible audience. Through his initiative and persistence, the Bank partnered with the University of the West Indies to stage “University in the Community”. This monthly lecture series afforded the Bank and the University the enviable opportunity to share with the Barbadian community invaluable research in numerous areas that were critical to the country’s social, economic and political development. The Barbadian society and people are the richer for this yeoman effort by Dr. Niles,” Dr Williams observed.

The Governor further stated that the Bank and the Barbadian public would remain eternally grateful to Dr. Niles for initiating such a forum, and said that as a tribute to Dr. Niles, she hoped that the series would live on.

“His contribution will be sorely missed,” Dr. Williams further observed.
