

Contributors

Dr. Daniel Boamah is the Director of the Research Department at the Central Bank of Barbados. He holds a B.Sc. degree in Physics from the University of Science and Technology, Kumasi, Ghana and MA and Ph.D. degrees in Economics from the University of Western Ontario, London, Ontario, Canada.

Roland Craigwell is Deputy Director, Economic Modelling, at the Central Bank of Barbados. A graduate of the University of the West Indies, the University of Warwick and the University of Southampton, he specialises in applied econometrics and his impressive range of publications have appeared in Caribbean and international journals.

Darrin Downes, a Senior Economist at the Central Bank of Barbados, is a graduate of the University of the West Indies and the State University of New York at Buffalo. Mr. Downes' research has focused on monetary and financial sector issues.

Kevin Greenidge is Chief Research Economist at the Central Bank of Barbados. Dr. Greenidge is a graduate of the University of the West Indies and the University of Cambridge and earned his Ph.D. in Economics from the University of Nottingham. Dr. Greenidge specialises in econometric modelling and forecasting.

Stacia Howard is an Economist with the Research Department of the Central Bank of Barbados. She obtained her Master of Arts degree in International Business and Languages from Heriot-Watt University in 2003.

Tracy Maynard, is an Economic Statistician in the Research Department of the Central Bank of Barbados. She holds a B.Sc in Economics and Accounts from the University of the West Indies.

Chanelle Maxwell, a former Economist with the Central Bank of Barbados, holds a B.Sc. Economics and Management degree from the University of the West Indies, Cave Hill, and a Master of International Business Administration from the University of South Carolina.

Alvon Moore is a Research Officer in the Research Department of the Central Bank of Barbados. He holds a B.Sc. in Economics and a M.Sc. in Finance and Business Economics from the University of the West Indies, Cave Hill. He was formerly a Trade Statistician with the Barbados Statistical Service.

Winston Moore, a former Economist with the Central Bank of Barbados, is a Lecturer, Department of Economics, University of the West Indies, Cave Hill. He obtained B.Sc and Masters degrees in Economics from the University of the West Indies and the University of Warwick, respectively.

Chris Milner is Professor of International Economics and Head of the School of Economics at the University of Nottingham. His research interests, which lie in the area of applied trade and trade policy analysis have been published widely in academic journals; in addition, he has authored or edited a number of books in these areas.

Contributors

Travis Mitchell is an Economist in the Research Department of the Central Bank of Barbados. He obtained his B.Sc. Economics degree from the University of the West Indies, Cave Hill, in 2004 and is currently pursuing a Masters of Science degree in Economics at the University of Warwick.

Marion Williams, Governor of the Central Bank of Barbados, is an Economics graduate of the University of the West Indies, holds a Ph.D. from the University of Surrey, is a Fellow of the Institute of Bankers of the United Kingdom, and a Certified Management Accountant. Dr. Williams has published several articles in regional and international journals and is also the author of three books on Economics.