

Contributors

---

Carlene Belford was an intern at the Central Bank of Barbados during the summer of 2001. Mrs. Belford holds an undergraduate degree in economics from the University of the West Indies and a Masters from the same university. Her research interest is financial economics.

Anton Belgrave is a senior economist at the Central Bank of Barbados with degrees from the University of the West Indies and the University of Kent, England. Mr. Belgrave specialises in the economics of financial institutions and of central banking. He is currently examining the determinants of loan losses of commercial banks in Barbados.

Trevor Campbell, a senior economist at the Central Bank of Barbados, is a graduate of the University of the West Indies and Queen's University in Canada. Mr. Campbell has written on balance of payments issues and his publications have appeared in Caribbean as well as international journals.

Harold Codrington is Adviser to the Governor of the Central Bank of Barbados. Mr. Codrington is a graduate of the University of the West Indies and York University in Canada and has published papers on the foreign sector, taxation, public transport and Caribbean integration.

Roland Craigwell is Chief Economist at the Central Bank of Barbados. A graduate of the University of the West Indies, the University of Warwick and the University of Southampton, he specialises in applied econometrics and his publications have appeared in Caribbean and international journals. Dr. Craigwell is currently working on panel data applications to financial institutions, labour market issues and empirical demand systems.

Darrin Downes, a senior economist at the Central Bank of Barbados, is a graduate of the University of the West Indies and the State University of New York at Buffalo. Mr. Downes' research has focused on monetary and financial sector issues.

Tessa Francillette was an intern at the Central Bank in the summer of 2001. Miss Francillette has undergraduate and post graduate degrees from the University of French Antilles and Guadeloupe, and specialises in development and environment economics.

Contributors

---

Kevin Greenidge is a senior economist at the Central Bank of Barbados. Mr. Greenidge, a graduate of the University of the West Indies and the University of Cambridge, specialises in econometric modelling and forecasting.

Winston Moore, an economist at the Central Bank of Barbados, holds B.Sc and Masters degrees in economics from the University of the West Indies and the University of Warwick, England, respectively. Mr. Moore's research interests are small business economics and the empirical modelling of financial institutions.

Yvonne Parris is Services Officer in the Management Information Systems Department of the Central Bank of Barbados. She is an MBA graduate of the University of Surrey, England, and has undertaken research in the area of electronic banking.

Aldeen Payne is Senior Librarian at the Central Bank of Barbados and a graduate of the University of the West Indies and the University of Pittsburgh. Ms. Payne has completed studies in records management and has prepared several bibliographies on local and regional publications.

Ryan Straughn, an economist at the Central Bank of Barbados, is an economics and mathematics graduate of the University of the West Indies and holds a Masters in econometrics from the University of Manchester, England.

Ann-Marie Warner is an economist at the Central Bank of Barbados and a graduate of the University of the West Indies and University of Waterloo, Canada, who is currently working on labour market and trade issues.

Warrick Ward is a former banking analyst at the Central Bank of Barbados. He holds a first degree in economics and accounting from the University of the West Indies, and a Masters in international banking and financial studies from the University of Southampton in England. His research has focused on e-commerce, life insurance, credit derivatives and asset-backed securitisation.

Contributors

---

Marion Williams, Governor of the Central Bank of Barbados, is an economics graduate of the University of the West Indies, holds a PhD. from the University of Surrey, is a Fellow of the Institute of Bankers of the United Kingdom, and a Certified Management Accountant. Dr. Williams, who has published several articles on public finance, investments, capital markets development and banking and finance, is also the author of two books, "Liberalising a Regulated Banking System", published by Avebury, and "Managing Public Finance in a Small Developing Economy", published by Praeger.